An Elegant, Magnificent Architectural Masterpiece, Suwon Hwaseong Fortress

What is Suwon Hwaseong Fortress?

Suwon Hwaseong is a dream fortress built by the King Jeongjo as a reformation ruler during the Joseon Dynasty. It is a second-tonone architectural structure we are proud of. Although many parts of the fortress had been damaged during the Japanese colonial era and Korean War, it had been repaired and restored since 1975 based on "The Construction Records of Hwaseong Fortress (Hwaseong songyouk eugye)", UNESCO Memory of the World that records its construction conditions. The restored Suwon Hwaseong Fortress was registered as UNESCO World Heritage in 1977 as its superiority was recognized.

How should we look around this beautiful fortress?

Suwon Hwaseong Fortress is located in the downtown area of Suwon and Dulle-gil Trail that stretches about 5.7km is formed along the fortress. There are diverse ways to enjoy the beauty of this fortress. You may slowly take a walk around the fortress, feeling the breath of King Jeongjo who had love for the people and filial piety, or you may focus on Jeong Yakyong's excellent scientific achievement that demonstrates the highlight of civil engineering and construction. Just by strolling along the fortress, you will enjoy fascinating artistic values as well as breathtaking landscapes. Experience a totally different scene anywhere on this connected trail.

A Taste of the Old Palace,

Elegant Charm of Hwaseong Haenggung

What is Hwaseong Haenggung?

King Jeongjo who was extremely devoted to his parents relocated his father's grave (Prince Jangheon or Prince Sado) to Hyeonryungwon (now, Yungreung) and built a new city in Suwon. As the king constructed Suwon Hwaseong Fortress, he also built Hwaseong Haenggung (Temporary Palace). It is located inside the fortress and it is the best among other temporary palaces in terms of scale or function. At normal times, it was used as the government office of Suwon. And when the King Jeongjo would stay in Hwaseong Haenggung various events were held such as royal banquets and civil service examinations. However, most facilities excluding Nangnamheon Hall were destroyed as a policy to obliterate Korean culture during the Japanese colonial period.

The first restoration project begun in 1996 and was open to the public in October, 2003. The restoration project is still under progress. As the hub of Korean Wave, the beauty of Hwaseong Haenggung is seen on various films and TV dramas, including 'Dae Jang Geum', 'Yi San', 'King and the Clown' and 'Moonlight Drawn by Clouds'.

Looking around Hwaseong Haenggung with different attractions (3)

As the main gate of Hwaseong Haenggung, 'Sinpungnu' means 'a new hometown'. King Jeongjo the Great regarded Suwon Hwaseong Fortress as another hometown. In 1795, 'Jinhyul' policy was implemented in front of Sinpungnu Gate with the king present. The policy was to serve the poor people with rice and porridge.

At the main building of Hwaseong Haenggung, King Jeongjo held the 60th birthday party for his mother, Crown Princess Hong.

Nangnamheon was not destroyed in the Japanese colonial period and its original state is preserved. King Jeongjo held special civil service examinations and ceremonies for Noraedang was built as King Jeongjo dreamed of his life after abdication from the throne.

Hwryeongjeon was built in the first year of King Sunjo's ruling to look up to the portrait of King Jeongjo. It was named after the first letter 'Hwa(華)' from 'Hwaseong' and ryeong(寧)' from the following phrase in "The Book of Odes": I would return and look into my parents (歸寧父母). Hwaryeongjeon is one of the representative places where the king's portrait was kept in the Joseon Dynasty. It was plain and elegant in honour of the King's wish.
